WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The Mexican elections next Sunday are to be a farce. This is expected both at the state department and in other administration circles. But in holding them, President Huerta has added to the danger of all foreigners in the southern republic. Because

Killed American and Wife

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 22.—Revolutionists under the command of General Carranza killed a young American and his wife at Durango, after first tying the woman to the bed and subjecting her to indignities, according to Mrs. Mary Towelson, a refugee who arrived here today from Durango, enroute to the home of relatives in New Mexico.

Thirty other Americans were ordered executed, according to Mrs. Towelson, but their lives were spared by the plea of a Mexican girl.

of this there is grave apprehension here. It is feared the announcement that there has been no choice and that Huerta will continue as "provisional president" and absolute dictator will precipitate demonstrations that may call for immediate action by the United States.

Feeling Against U. S. Grows

The policy of "hands off" announced by President Wilson will be changed only by serious outrages against foreigners. But with prices of all foodstuffs and clothing advanced by leaps and bounds, and exchange in Mexico City already beyond the prohibitive mark, the feeling against Americans who are held responsible for existing conditions continue to grow. All of the confidential advices received by the state department during the last ten days have emphasized the gravity of affairs.

A plan of action has been completed. It is carefully guarded. But it is known that if it should become necessary both the army and navy could act at a moment's notice. The Atlantic fleet starts Saturday for the Mediterranean. But officers and men here on furlough declare they expect being caught by wireless orders before they are half way across the Atlantic and ordered to Mexican waters. The ships are in good condition for either a fight or a frolic. Ammunition magazines and cookstoves are jammed to the limit. The crews are recruited to the notch mark.

Diaz Refuses to Quit
VERA CRUZ, Oct. 22.—(Via Galveston.)—General Felix Diaz arrived here from Havanna aboard the German steamship Corcovado. A silent crowd greeted him at the pier because of the popular impression that Huerta had ordered the soldiers to fire on too noisy demonstrators.

An air of suppressed excitement pervaded the whole city as the Comovado drew into the harbor. Diaz did not land immediately. It was said that he did not know when he would land. Up to the moment that the steamship came to her quay, Huejutla agents who boarded her from the Mexican gunboat Zaragoza continued their efforts to persuade Diaz not to land in Mexico. They based their persuasions on the argument that his failure to land until after Sunday would greatly simplify the elections and perhaps avert a national crisis.

The German warship Bertha arrived off Vera Cruz simultaneously with Corcovado.

The Zaragoza met the Corcovado last night, five miles off Vera Cruz and General Manuel Vidauraz, private secretary to General Alvarado, former war minister and Huerta's candidate for vice president, boarded the vessel. He had a conference with Diaz lasting several hours, in which he endeavored to obtain the warriors' promise not to land, but Diaz refused to agree.

Soldiers Everywhere
The entire city was vigilantly patrolled and federal soldiers were to be seen everywhere. Their presence dampened the ardor of the Diazists.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

BETTY'S LAST FLING

By A. MARIA CRAWFORD

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"I dare say you'll think me a spendthrift, Aunt Patricia," said Betty soberly. "For I have spent my substance, not wasted it, mind you, on pretty clothes. For once in my life, I am really prepared for a visit and its attendant festivities without being constantly confronted with the question, wherewithal shall I be clothed?"

"I thought you looked particularly well when you came this morning," commented the girl's aristocratic old kinswoman, smiling. "I am glad that you have pretty clothes, for the season has been especially gay here and all my friends want to entertain you. I have a scheme that will require pretty things, and so I was wondering last night how I could get you to a good modiste without hurting your feelings."

"It isn't going to a good modiste that hurts my feelings, dear Aunt Patricia, but the fact that I can't afford a good one," laughed Betty. "I anticipated the time of my life up here, so I extravagantly prepared for what I felt was to be the last fling before I was relegated to the shelf of has-been and old maids. I'll wager you won't be ashamed of me this trip. Such velvets, such laces and such darling little white gowns made simply to wear with mother's wonderful sapphires! She gave them to me on my last birthday."

"You were—"

"Don't breathe it to a soul! I was twenty-eight."

"You don't look it, and that is a comfort. How have you kept your youth when you've had to worry so over finances? You've managed well on a ridiculously inadequate income. Your mother ought to be proud of you."

"Dear me, she is too proud! When the relatives come around and begin to question, pleasantly, of course," Betty made a wry face, "just why I have never married, you should see her bristle. I am too good for any man living, according to her opinion."

"You've had a good many chances, excellent ones, too. I have often wondered why you are single."

The girl's face was grave as she sat there looking pensively in the fire which was necessary to Miss Patricia's comfort since the fall days had brought a chill in the air.

"Maybe the happy memory of a youthful romance has woven a fabric of dreams too beautiful and too precious to lose, Betty. It was so with me."

Betty glanced at the proud old face, flushed with the knowledge that at last she had disclosed the secret kept in her heart for half a century. The girl slipped down on a hassock by Miss Patricia and lifted a wrinkled hand to her warm cheek. "I am afraid I was not intended for romance, Aunt Patricia, for the years have come and gone without any lasting love and now," Betty sighed, "now I am too old."

"Tut, tut," said Miss Patricia, sharply. "You are never too old for romance. Girls don't love but once as they did when I was young. Times have changed."

"Why have you never married, Aunt Patricia?" asked Betty timidly. "You were made for love and happiness."

"It all happened so long ago and yet it stays fresh in my mind as if it were only yesterday. We quarreled. I knew that I was in the right, and although he apologized time and again, I was too proud to forgive him. So I spoiled my whole life because of a little jealous anger."

Betty stroked the hand that lay in her own. A great cluster of diamonds in an old fashioned setting glittered on her engagement finger.

"That was the ring he gave me," she went on softly. "He died a year ago and sent it back to me with a message asking me to wear it until I, too—"

The old voice wavered and broke. Tears trickled down the withered cheeks and dropped on the jet across her breast and sparkled like jewels in the firelight. "He was good to his wife," she took up the story again, "and she died without knowing that he kept an old picture of me and this ring locked in a secret drawer in his desk. Only his son knew—the son of his old age. He brought the ring to me and told me all about—the end. At the last he said, 'Patty, he always called me so, 'Patty, if you'll give me your hand, we'll go up on the hill where the flowers are in bloom. It's summer up there, Patty. Let us go!'"

He thought that we were young again, Betty."

"What a beautiful love story, Aunt Patricia!" the girl said when she could control her voice. "What a beautiful story and yet how sad."

"I had my dreams, child, and the hope that he was happy. He loved his boy—he was happy in him."

The old clock in the hall struck 6 and Miss Patricia sat up hastily and brushed her hand across her eyes.

"His son is coming to dinner to-night. Run, dress and look your prettiest! If love ever comes take it, my dear! Don't let anything stand in your way."

For a long time Miss Patricia sat before the fire, dreaming the old dreams that had lasted and kept her heart young for seventy years. Somebody stooped over her chair and kissed her lightly upon the forehead. She looked up and smiled to see him there. It was only a part of her dream, she thought, until she heard

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night, if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and is in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. Agent, Chas. Beyschlag, Druggist, 503 Main St.

Betty coming down the stairs, humming an old love song.

"So Miss Betty is really here?"

Miss Patricia laughed, a little silvery laugh that held in it a minor note of sadness that always made the man's heart ache.

"I didn't realize that it was you, Bob. I thought I was just dreaming when you kissed me." Then Bob Thorne knew that she had been dreaming of his father.

"This is Betty, Mr. Thorne."

Miss Patricia herself gasped at the lovely picture in the doorway. The firelight silhouetted the slender figure against the velvet hangings, touched the brown hair to gold and set the sapphires, no deeper blue than the girl's eyes, to sparkling like the waves of the sea when the sunshine kisses them and set them to dancing like fairies at play.

"You—you are just like the picture of Miss Patricia when she was a girl," he said slowly.

"I have seen a picture of you," said Betty. "Aunt Patricia keeps it in a little silver frame on her desk."

"It was his father when he was young."

It didn't take Miss Patricia long to see that although most of her dreams had been in vain, her very last dream could come true. So after dinner she left the two together in the drawing room, sweet as incense with the fragrance of the memories stored there through the years.

Betty's heart fluttered in a new and wholly unexpected way whenever she met the calm deep eyes of Bob Thorne.

"Miss Patricia has been telling me a lot of interesting things about you, but I believe that you are younger than she thinks."

He was so serious about it that Betty laughed while she secretly blessed the skilled fingers that had created her youthful frock.

"Don't you see, won't you know that we are going to love each other?" He went over and stood by her chair looking down at her. "Don't you see how it is given to us to bring to fulfillment all the love Aunt Patty and father felt in those long, lost years, Betty?"

Betty's laugh seemed to stop in her throat. She stood up clasping her hands together nervously. "Why, I have only known you—"

"Time makes no difference. When I first saw you in the doorway, I knew you were the woman I had always been waiting for. Don't fight against fate, Betty. You are to me what Miss Patty was to father all of

Free from Catarrh

Mr. John O. Atkinson, No. 1359 North Emporia Ave., Wichita, Kas., writes under date of January 10, 1897:

"I wrote you about my case of catarrh, which had been of twenty-five years standing. At times I was almost past going."

I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me. Your remedies do all that you claim for them and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions." (See "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.)

In a later letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years experience with Peruna: "I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna, and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still free from catarrh."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

Hearing About the Leaves.

Daddy's Bedtime

The Leaf Who Wouldn't Give Up

JACK and Evelyn climbed on daddy's lap. They were tired and happy for that afternoon they had taken a drive with grandpa way out to the farm where every year grandpa ordered enough of those lovely big red apples to last till winter.

"And the trees in the woods when we drove back were such a pretty color," Evelyn said.

"Yes," agreed daddy, "they are putting on their traveling clothes. They are so glad that their summer's work is done and that soon they will be free to leave the tree and flutter off by themselves."

"Once there was a little maple leaf. He had fluttered and danced on his twig all summer."

"When autumn came he noticed that many of the leaves around him were turning from green to red."

"Why don't you put on a red coat, too?" one of his companions asked him. "Green is good enough for me," he replied.

"But don't you see we are all dressed in red?" the leaf urged. "These are our traveling suits, you know. You can't travel if you are not dressed right."

"Don't want to travel," the leaf replied grumpily. "This tree is good enough for me."

"The other leaves knew that as soon as the old mother tree had grown the little buds that were to take their places and out of which the leaves of next year were to come they would be free to fly away. They could feel the little round buds forcing their way up and loosening the ends of their stems from the twigs."

"And one morning the wind came along and picked them up one after another and whirled them away through the air."

"But the green leaf that still clung to the tree began to feel lonely. All his friends and companions were gone, and the red and scarlet leafed trees all about the maple were sending their leaves down to join the army of leaf travelers."

"You'd best change your mind before it is too late," the mother maple said to him.

"But the little leaf pretended not to hear. One night Jack Frost came along. He was looking for late leaves, and he nipped and nipped the maple leaf. In the morning the leaf was shriveled and pale. All winter it swayed on the branch, for the frost had killed it. The other little leaves, after a delightful frolic, had gone cozily to sleep before the frost came and so did not feel it."

"There's a Reason"

EASY CHANGE When Coffee Is Doing Harm

A lady writes from the land of cotton of the results of a four years' use of the food beverage, Postum:

"Ever since I can remember we had used coffee three times a day. It had a more or less injurious effect upon us all, and I suffered almost death from indigestion and nervousness."

"I know it was coffee, because when I would leave it off for a few days I would feel better. But it was hard to give coffee up, even though I realized how harmful it was to me."

"At last I found a perfectly easy way to make the change. Four years ago I abandoned the coffee habit and began to drink Postum and I also influenced the rest of the family to do the same."

"Even the children are allowed to drink it as freely as they do water. And it has done us all great good. I no longer suffer from indigestion, and my nerves are in admirable tone since I began to use Postum. We never use coffee any more."

"We appreciate Postum as a delightful and healthful beverage, which not only invigorates but supplies the best of nourishment as well." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE MINIMUM WAGE AS A STRIKEBREAKER

The minimum wage, which is still being discussed as a theory in the east, some states having appointed commissions for the study of the question, has reached the stage of actual experiment in several of the far western states. In Portland, Ore., a strike was called in a fruit packing factory in July, and fifty of the women workers demanded an increased wage. The I. W. W. immediately accepted the opportunity to organize these workers, picketing the plant and appealing to street audiences to support the strikers in their contention. The Oregon Industrial Welfare commission, consisting of three members, one of them a woman, was granted extraordinary powers in the regulation of industries in which women or minors are employed, and had just been organized, beginning its work of investigation in Portland.

Naturally, it turned its attention first to this packing company, and proceeded to examine into the conditions of wages, hours, and sanitation. It found, according to the report of the chairman, Father O'Hara, that many of the women were paid forty and fifty cents a day, and the commission decided at once that this was less than a living wage in Portland. The orders of the commission could not be made effective, under the law, in less than sixty days, by which time the work in the factory would be over. But the owners of the plant agreed to put into effect immediately a minimum wage of six dollars a week.

The strike was broken, though the I. W. W. endeavored to prolong it for a while. The commission will grant personal permits for the employment of individual workers who are partially incapacitated, and will allow them to receive less than the minimum wage. It issued a general order, applying to all the factories and mercantile establishments in Portland that employ women, that hereafter, unless further investigations shall lead to an increase in the minimum, no such establishment shall pay its employees less than six dollars a week. It may as well be accepted that any business employing women and children must be subject to regulation in the interests of the future citizens of the state and the mothers of the race. As Mrs. Florence Kelly recently remarked, "The payroll has become public property."—Harper's.

A POOR REFUGE FOR THE INSURGENTS

Everett Colby, a product of Wisconsin, but known to fame as the original New Jersey "insurgent," who introduced the term "progressive republican" in that state, has deserted that party and become an advocate of the bull moose. In discussing his new political affiliation, which really entailed no change of heart, Mr. Colby says:

"When I proposed a bill that would make the railroads pay a fair share of their taxes, republican members of the legislature said to me, 'Colby, you must be crazy. What will we do? The Pennsylvania railroad gives us the money with which we win our elections.'"

Even after the republican party repeatedly violated the trust of the people in its desire to serve the interests, we stayed within the ranks, hoping that the leaders would come to their senses. Then came the straw that broke the camel's back—The steal of the republican nominations at Chicago. Then, realizing that the republican party had lost its usefulness forever, we followed Roosevelt, the greatest moral leader the world ever saw, into a new party. In this new party rests the great hope of the nation today. This is the party that is going to prevent the increase of our pauper class; it is the party that is going to cut down the cost and save us from the horror and bloodshed of a revolution."

In the national aspect of this incident it is not strange that men like Colby revolted at the despotism and perfidy of the old republican party, nor is it surprising that they who repudiated the party of Aldrich and Penrose should withhold themselves from the party of Parker and Tillman. However, it is passing strange that in seeking political liberty they should accept the "benevolent despotism" of Roosevelt.

Had Mr. Colby turned his gaze back to his former home state he would have seen that, under proper leadership, the republican party can be made the party of freedom and progress.

Vice President Sherman advises the men to get married before they are thirty. Most of them would be willing to do so if they can be assured that the girls will provide them with a good home.

If the first Sunday in June is made Father's day as Congressman Moore asks, it will be considered an appropriate time for the old man to take the family on a good automobile ride.

After reading those alluring mail order catalogs, the jubilant housewife sits down and proceeds to order a $200 dining room set for $6.49.

So far none of the governors has been impeached for winning money in the stock market, but then there isn't much danger of that happening.

Dancing teachers are trying to reform the new dances, and the young people are fearful that the necessary objectionable features will be cut out.

While the tariff bill is out of the way, the congressmen can find plenty of other things to talk about and delay business.

ASK CONGRESS PROBE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Congressional investigation of conditions in the coal fields of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company in Colorado was requested today in a resolution by Representative Keating of that state.

Inquiry whether there is a combination in restraint of interstate trade to advance prices, whether the coal company's control and whether firearms and ammunition have been imported to quell strike troubles, is asked of congress.

GOVERNOR SILENT

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 22.—Asked today for an expression of his views concerning the impeachment of Governor Sulzer, of New York, Governor Major stated that he did not wish to intrude his opinion where it was not likely desired and would have no effect one way or the other.

FIRE THREATENS PLANT

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 22.—Fire which started at noon threatened to destroy the four story factory building at 416-418 North Fourth street, occupied by the Newcomb Brothers' Wall Paper company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the country.

CANADA SHIPS STEERS

NEENAH, Wis., Oct. 21.—The first train of Canadian cattle shipped since the enactment of the new tariff law, passed through here yesterday. There were twenty-seven car loads of "duty free" steers on the train.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Passing of "Fluffy Ruffles" How strange and queer to us appear, The gowns of years gone by; When pretty Fluffy Ruffles Was in the public eye; When skirts were more than four yards round; When all the modish world Was garbed in fluffed and ruffled frocks That tossed and swished and swirled.

When draperies were ample And fell in rippling rows, While here and there were shirrings, And here and there were bows; When puffs and plaits and ruffles Were massed with wondrous skill, And from beneath the frilly frocks, Flashed petticoats a-frill.

Now fashion's wand has waved away The ruffles and rosettes; The Tailor-made achieve effects Of charming Silhouettes. A clinging bit of drapery, A soft and graceful sash, Hang o'er a simple little skirt That shows a jaunty slash.

Yes, Fluffy Ruffles' day is past, Her styles are out of date. The Girl of Tailor-mades has come, With lines correct and straight. She's picturesque and stunning, And any one can see She's really more attractive Than Fluffy used to be. —Carolyn Wells.

Poverty's Advantage

In his office one morning a Chicago broker had occasion to use a pocket knife. He had forgotten his own, as was the case with every clerk in the room who owned such an implement. Finally the office boy was summoned, and at once produced a knife.

"How is it, Henry?" asked the "boss," "that you, of all the force, always have your knife with you?" "I suppose it's because wages are so low," suggested the boy. "I can't afford more than one pair of pants." —Lippincott's.

On the Ferryboat

"Why do 'ey talk dis a 'teamboat?" asked Flossie. "Tause it carries teams across de river," returned the small brother, consciously proud of his superior knowledge.—Harper's Young People.

His System

"Farmers, thank goodness, take life a little easier, thanks to their various unions and combinations, than they used to do."

The speaker was John H. Kimble of Port Deposit, secretary of the Farmers' National congress, an organization of 3,000,000 farmers. He continued:

"Farmers are not nowadays like old Cornelius Husk. A new hand said to the old man one morning in the harvest season:

"I suppose you believe in the eight-hour system, Corney?" "That's what I do," grunted old Corn Husk, as he swung his pitchfork vigorously. "Eight hours in the forenoon, eight hours in the afternoon, and two or three hours overtime after supper in the hay and harvest season—that's my system."—Washington Star.

A Romance of Extraordinary Distinctions

The Marshal

By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews Author of The Perfect Tribute, etc. Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company

He cried it out loud, reckless, forgetting everything. But she did not forget. In an instant her hand was on his mouth, and she was whispering in terror.

"Francois, dear Francois, be careful. We are not safe yet. We have a village to ride through—see, there is a house. It is almost time for them to be awake. Ride fast. It is two miles yet."

They were racing again over the soft ground, the horses' unshod feet making little noise, and Francois' heart was playing mad music. No need now of cognac. Then they were galloping down the sand of a lonely beach, and with that there was a little group of people and a boat drawn up; and they had pulled in the horses, and Francois felt himself lifted off like a child and lying like a very little, worn-out child in the general's arms; and the general was crying, swearing, hugging him without shame. Pietro was there; Pietro was rubbing the thin hands in a futile useless sort of way and holding them by turns to his face. Alixe, her peasant hat off now, bent over them, lovelier than ever before, not minding her boy's dress, and smiled at him, wordless. There was a huge man also who took the horses, and Francois wondered if he had heard aright that Alixe called him "little Battista." Wondering very much at everything, the voices grew far away and the faces uncertain, and he decided that it was without doubt a dream and that Battista would unlock the door slowly and bring in his breakfast. And with that he knew nothing more till he awoke in a boat.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Rest and Safety.

He heard the sound of waves outside, the slipping of ropes, the flapping of sails. He kept his eyes closed a few minutes, not daring to open them. There was a blessed atmosphere of rest and safety about him; he feared to find it unreal if he opened his eyes. He feared to find himself in the straw of a dungeon. He listened attentively—surely sails and cordage and slapping waves—and then he was aware of the motion of a boat. Cautiously he peered from under half-closed lids. A small room, a boat's cabin; nothing to tell if he wear in the hands of friends or of enemies. Yet—was it a dream that he had seen the general and Pietro, had ridden long miles in the dawn, with Alixe? Such dreams come to comfort poor prisoners—he knew that. But at that point his eyes flashed wide and his arms flew out. Something more had crept into that circumscribed field of vision—a quiet figure sitting in a dark corner of the little room. "Alixe!"

Not a dream, not another world; just the close sweetness of her face bent over him, of her hands holding his, of her courageous soft voice speaking to him carelessly as if he were a child, as if he were dear to her.

"You must not talk, Francois. After a while—not yet. You are very weak."

So he smiled and lay happily, clutching her hand with his long, hot, shaking fingers. Like a bird's claws for thinness. But a hunted beast may not rest absolutely till it knows if the bloodhounds are distant. The cavernous eyes turned on Alixe with a question, and she understood.

"You want to know if you are safe, dear Francois?" and she stroked his hand. "Yes. You are on the boat of little Battista—Luigi's boat it is now. Little Battista gave it to Luigi when he went to France, and Luigi is his friend and also one of Pietro's people. You will hear about that later. We are going now to the harbor of Commachio, sixty miles from Castellote. You are to be put on board a big ship there, and taken away to safety. Yet you are safe now—rest in that, for it is true."

And Francois drew a deep trembling breath and, holding Alixe's hand, fell asleep.

When he awoke next his eyes opened swiftly and turned to the corner where Alixe had sat. It was not Alixe there this time, but the general. And the general came and sat down by him and patted his hand and swore softly at him saying, "sacre de bois," and "nom d'un chien," and such things; and called him his own boy, and told him how his mother and father were well and confident of his rescue; yes, and told him also how it was Alixe who had waited every night for him in Riders' Hollow, and would let no one take her place.

"It was the best arrangement," said the general. "For Pietro is too well known—it would have been unsafe for you both. And I am so much the old officer that I should have been remarked instantly; also I am heavy in the saddle. But Alixe passed easily for some peasant lad with a led horse for his master; also she rides light and so could save the horses, which was important, for only two horses could we have and they were to be in service one knew not how long."

Francois asked a feeble question. "Ah—Pietro. He is a fine sort, our Pietro. They adore him, here in his country. There is a farmer back there who owed life and home to the Zappis, to Pietro's father and mother. The horses were his. They were brought after dark and returned before sunrise, but it was far, and hard on the beasts. And a risk for the good Giuseppe; but he was glad to serve Pietro; they adore Pietro."

Quite malapropos, the general leaned over at this point and stretched out a heavy hand and patted Francois' pale cheek and smiled and said, as he had said so many years ago on that morning when the news came of the marquis' death, "It is a good thing to have a son, my Francois." And Francois, being fed shortly after, fell asleep again like a tired baby.

And the next time he awoke it was with a new feeling; with a desire and a hope to live. Pietro sat watching him and brought him warm milk and held his head up as he drank it, like a woman. Then, in quiet low tones, he explained all the puzzle which Francois had by now begun to wonder over. It seemed that just before little Battista had brought Francois' letter to Viques, Piero had received another unexpected letter, from a Colonel Hampton in Virginia, whose estate lay next the six thousand acres of land which the Marquis Zappi had bought fifteen years before. Colonel Hampton wrote with two requests. The first was that the Marquis Zappi should come to Virginia, or send some one with authority to look after his property. The land was going to rack and ruin for want of management; the uncontrolled slaves on the place were demoralizing to the neighborhood. Colonel Hampton had done what he could, but he had not the power of a master, and moreover he was busy with his own large estate. The marquis should come or send a qualified agent at once.

MARKET DAY AT PANAMA

Some New and Unusual Species of the Vegetable and Animal Kingdoms Offered by Vendors.

By WILLIS J. ABBOT, Author of "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose."

Copyright, 1913, Syndicate Publishing Co., New York. All rights reserved.

The sun, rising red out of the Pacific Ocean—a geographical phenomenon that never fails to interest and perplex tourists—is barred by the slender lines, or gashed by the broad sails of innumerable caycos beating down to Panama with strange exotic products for the market. Every day is market day at Panama, but the crowded little open-air mart is seen at its best of a Saturday, or Sunday in early morning. All night long the native boats, mostly caycos hewn out of a single log, sometimes of mahogany, and often as much as thirty-five feet long, and with a schooner rig, have been drifting in, propelled by the never-failing trade wind. They come from the Bayano river country, from Chorrera, from Taboga and the isles of Pearls, from the Bay of San Miguel and from the land of the San Blas Indians. Great sailors these latter, veritable vikings of the tropics, driving their caycos through shrieking gales when the ocean steamers find it prudent to stay in port.

The market opens at dawn, and buyers are there almost as soon as the sellers, for early rising is the rule in the tropics. Along the sidewalks, on the curbs, in the muddy roadway even, the diverse fruits and food products of the country are spread forth to tempt the robust appetites of those gathered about. Here is an Indian woman, the color of a cocoanut and crinkled as to skin like a piece of Chinese crepe. Before her is spread out her stock, diverse and in some items curious. Green peppers, tomatoes a little larger than a small plum, a cheese made of goat's milk and packed to about the consistency of butter; a few yams, peas, limes and a papaya or two are the more familiar edibles. Something shaped like a banana and wrapped in corn husks arouses my curiosity.

"What is it?" "Five cents." "No, no! I mean what is it? What's it made of?" "Fi centavo!"

In despair over a lack of Indo-Spanish patois, I buy it and find a little native sugar, very moist and very dark, made up like a sausage, or a tamale in corn husks. Other mysterious objects turn out to be ginseng, which appeals to the resident Chinese; the mamei, a curious pulpy fruit the size of a large peach, with a skin like chamois and a fleshy looking pit about twice the size of a peach-stone; the sapodilla, a plum-colored fruit with a mushy interior, which, when cut transversely, shows a star-like marking and is sometimes

Getting back to Health

STEEL SLIVER GIVES BLOOD POISONING

Clyde Butterfield, 1528 Prospect street, is seriously ill at his home with a case of blood poisoning, contracted from a steel splinter. Butterfield is an employee of the Arctic Ice and Fuel company. The small piece of steel got into the fleshy part of the right hand while unloading ice. The hand has swelled to several times the normal size.

Blue Monday.

In Bavaria and some other parts of Europe the Monday before Lent was at one time known as Blue Monday. The churches were decorated with blue, and the day was kept as a holiday by classes whose ordinary avocation required them to labor on Sunday. As this led to violent disturbances the custom was legally abolished.

Daily Thought.

All that I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for what I have not seen.—Emerson.

Flowers of Music.

The graces—namely, the shake, the turn, the appoggiatura, etc.—are the flowers of music; and the clear, correct, and delicate execution of them embellishes and exalts every melody and every passage. But when they are played stiff, hard, or unintelligibly, they may rather be compared to blots of ink or spots of dirt.—Carl Czerny.

MOTHER LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs." You don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation, poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

DENIES SHE IS KILLED

WIFE WHOM HENRY SPENCER "CONFESSIONED" HE MURDERED FILES SUIT FOR ANNUITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Nellie Koenig Spencer, one of the wives whom Henry Spencer, under arrest in Chicago, has "confessed" to having killed, today is awaiting word from her attorney as to an annulment suit which she has arranged for him to file for her.

Spencer said Miss Koenig was a maid for Helen Gould, that he met her at the Martha Washington hotel, married her and then killed her for her money.

Mrs. Spencer today declared that the only truth in the statement was that they met at the Martha Washington hotel, where she was a maid and Spencer was a porter. They were married September 10, 1903, Mrs. Spencer said. Three days after their marriage Spencer disappeared with $110 of her money, she charges.

FIND HUNTER HEADLESS

NEW GLARUS, Wis., Oct. 22.—Searchers, who, for four days have been looking for J. L. It is thought his shotgun was discharged while he was climbing the fence.

Youthful Diplomat.

Harry is small but diplomatic. The other day he wanted his mother to come out on the veranda with him. The mother, being busy, refused, and Harry invented various expedients, from informing her that he was tired and lonely to complaining of a pain in his tummy, in the hope of inducing her to change her mind. Finally he called sweetly: "Mother, dear, I don't want you to stay out here if you don't want to, but I do want to kiss you very much." Mother came out.

BIG FUNERAL FOR FIREMAN ULRICH

Young Man Killed in Wreck at Nelson Buried with Impressive Ceremonies at Potosi Home

The largest number ever attending any funeral in Potosi was present yesterday morning, when the last services were held over the body of C. C. Ulrich, young Burlington fireman, who was killed in the wreck at Nelson, Wis., last Friday. The funeral was in charge of the La Crosse Knights of Columbus, Ulrich was a newly joined member of the order. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen also took part in the ceremonies.

The body was taken to Potosi by a committee of local K. C.'s, consisting of E. J. Conway, Edward Coughlin, John Flanagan and Jack Kerrigan.

The crowd of friends attending the funeral filled the German Catholic church at Potosi to overflowing. There were 150 carriages in the funeral procession. One hundred and six relatives of the fireman attended. Six little girls, ranging in ages from six to fourteen years old, acted as flower girls.

There were six active pall-bearers, intimate friends of the popular young man. The honorary pall bearers were representatives of the K. C. order and the Brotherhood.

Many north side railroad men, among whom Ulrich was well liked, attended the funeral. Among them were Timothy Goyette, Frank Mickey, Keran Egan, E. W. Wheaton, Edward Laughlin, John Schumacher and Michael Dorsey. Mr. Dorsey was engineer of the engine on which Ulrich was killed.

The bowling season was officially opened last night on the north side at the Bismarck Bowling alleys, on George street, the Nelsons winning three straight games.

Oyster Week Oct. 20 to 25

Why You Should EAT OYSTERS

BECAUSE President Rowe of the Oyster Growers and Dealers Association of North America says:

"While the cost of meat has greatly increased and has become prohibitive to many consumers, the great increase in the production of oysters by artificial propagation and cultivation permits them to be furnished to the consumer at no more cost than many years ago."

BECAUSE Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, Chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry, says:

"I could wish the number of sources of dangerous milk supply was as small and the percentage of pure, wholesome milk was as great as the wholesome, safe oysters that reach our table."

BECAUSE Dr. Julius Nelson, Professor of Biology of Rutgers College, says:

"Oysters are a good food. Oysters come nearer in composition to cow's milk than do most other meats, as all the four kinds of nutrients needed are present in good degree. Oysters have a larger excess of the flesh-building substance relative to the other constituents than milk, so we 'balance the ration' by addition of starchy foods and fats when eating oysters, thus securing a good meal at a cost that compares favorably with that when other meats are chosen."

POTATO SETS RECORD
MRS. D. Y. NEWTON EXHIBITS SWEET POTATO WHICH WEIGHS SIX POUNDS WHEN DUG FROM EARTH

"The biggest sweet potato ever raised in this part of the country," is the verdict of all who have seen a giant tuber on exhibit in the window of The Tribune. The sweet potato was raised by Mrs. D. Y. Newton on her farm in Hixon Park. The farm is known as the old Miller place.

The sweet potato, together with a smaller one, is of a red variety, raised from a plant grown by Theodore Kienahs. The large vegetable weighed six pounds when dug, and the smaller one pound. Both came from the same hill.

Their growth was phenomenal, according to Mrs. Newton. They were not planted until well into July. Mrs. Newton attributes their size to the extreme hot weather that prevailed shortly after they were planted, and to the sandy soil in which they were grown.

"I don't know what I'll do with it," she said in response to a question. "It is big enough to make a meal all by itself. I only wish I had dug it in time to exhibit it at the Interstate fair."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW
Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Northwest News

COLD WAVE CAUSE OF POTATO DAMAGE

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 22.—When the temperature dropped to 12 degrees above zero last night it is thought to have seriously damaged undug potatoes in the Red River valley. About 19 to 15 per cent of the acreage has not been dug because recent rains delayed the work.

Those with potatoes in warehouses are regarded as especially fortunate, as possible damage to the fields may result in an advance of prices when the effect of the cold snap is fully investigated.

SEND BALMER TO BUY ALFALFA SEED

FERGUS FALLS, Minn., Oct. 22.—The necessary pledges of funds were obtained to send F. E. Balmer, district superintendent of county agricultural agents, to Montana at once to buy $1,000 worth of alfalfa seed to be sold to the farmers of Otter Tail county. Twenty leading business men signed a guarantee to take the seed in the event that any of it should not be sold. The movement is undertaken with a view to interesting the farmers in alfalfa, as this county would be one of the best places in the northwest to raise it, the soil here having exactly the right elements for its successful growth.

When Your Appetite Comes Back To You

It is a Sure Sign Your Stomach is Able to Take, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Give You a Rousing Appetite

It is the greatest joy in the world to be able to eat what one wants and no misery can compare with that which comes when an appetite fails. When the stomach cannot digest food the system revolts at the very idea of eating, but when the digestive apparatus is restored to its normal condition every quality of mind seems to make a man cheerful.

"That's the Way I Used to Look. What's your think of me now?"

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the peristaltic action churns and moves the food around the stomach walls, the powerful ingredients in these tablets instantly begin digesting the food, as they are forced through it and around it.

These tablets regulate the strength of gastric juices. If there is too much acid or alkali then Stuart's Dyspepsia tablets reduce or dilute these tating and raw conditions and shield evil conditions and prevent the irritating and raw stomachs which always come with dyspepsia, indigestion, etc.

It is the very essence of pleasure to a stomach sufferer to know that he can digest any meal if he will only take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating.

The use of one of these tablets after meals will in a very short time restore your appetite to its normal condition and you will be able to enjoy your food with an old time relish.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Price, 50 cents.

CITY SEALERS MEET

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22.—(Special.)—Careless and dishonest use of weights and measures was the subject of discussion at yesterday and today's conference of state and city sealers in the assembly chamber of the capitol. William Winder, a state sealer, declared that operation of scales by dealers is often a matter of guess work rather than of weight. Some dealers are known to hold scales in a draught where the air affects the equilibrium. Mr. Winder, who spoke on dairy and creamery scales, said there is great ignorance in operating the Babcock test.

State Highway Commission Has Settled Distribution of $1,230,000 Road Appropriation

LA CROSSE GETS $19,466.58

Milwaukee's Share Biggest with Dane and Rock Counties Second and Third

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22. — Distribution by counties of the $1,230,000 state highway appropriation available for construction in 1919 has been made by the state highway commission. The total amount voted by county boards was $1,548,839.48, so that the funds are oversubscribed by about $320,000.

According to State Highway Engineer A. R. Hirst, about 1,600 miles of road should be built next year under the state aid law, and about 300 bridges. All the counties are now doing work under the law. There are 1,588 units of government which will receive state aid, and of this number 1,211 applied for it. A number of counties, including Fond du Lac, Eau Claire, Manitowish, Sheboygan, Walworth, Washington and Waukesha, failed to call for state aid to the aggregate amount of $59,786.85, which amount will be apportioned according to the ratio of their pledges among certain other counties which together called for $378,626.33 more than they were entitled to.

Milwaukee's apportionment is the largest. Dane is second, Rock third and Dodge fourth.

The apportionment by counties follows: Adams, $4,202.73; Ashland, $8,814.74; Barron, $10,821.86; Bayfield, $8,399.87; Brown, $24,725.31; Buffalo, $8,757.99; Burnett, $2,700; Calumet, $11,425; Chippewa, $13,160.10; Clark, $13,312.84; Columbia, $22,495.32; Crawford, $6,310; Dane, $61,579.93; Dodge, $33,978; Door, $8,838.40; Douglas, $23,380.40; Dunn, $9,500; Eau Claire, $5,075; Florence, $2,615.89; Fond du Lac, $20,625.05; Forest, $7,374.08; Grant, $25,080.22; Green, $24,875.38; Green Lake, $9,450; Iowa, $15,325; Iron, $4,394.75; Jackson, $8,677.99; Jefferson, $24,038.25; Juneau, $9,660.16; Kewaunee, $23,103.86; Kewaunee, $9,317.98; La Crosse, $19,466.58; Lafayette, $14,525; Langlade, $8,314.32; Lincoln, $8,033.36; Manitowish, $19,253; Marathon, $23,298.60; Marinette, $12,397.86; Marquette, $5,084.71; Milwaukee, $241,255.57; Monroe, $15,973.64; Oconto, $9,560.12; Oneida, $5,780.22; Outagamie, $25,027.48; Ozaukee, $9,240; Pepin, $3,062.57; Pierce, $9,731.70; Polk, $9,814.47; Portage, $12,084.39; Price, $6,422.80; Racine, $22,814.78; Richland, $11,940.83; Rock, $34,889.85; Rusk, $6,261.32; St. Croix, $11,817.50; Sauk, $24,854.72; Sawyer, $4,120; Shawano, $12,277.09; Sheboygan, $21,625; Taylor, $6,734.48; Trempealeau, $11,632.11; Vernon, $13,821.56; Vilas, $3,129.84; Walworth, $15,125; Washburn, $3,467.87; Washington, $7,741; Waukesha, $17,625; Waupaca, $16,534.29; Waushara, $9,168.88; Winnebago, $29,137.20; Wood, $14,867.05; total, $1,230,000.

Congressman Says Different Method of Supervising Land Must Be Evolved

LAKE MOHONK, N. Y., Oct. 22.—That the next generation of the Indians will be destitute and in all probability anarchistic unless the United States adopts a different method of supervising their lands in the west was declared by Representative William H. Murray before the Lake Mohonk conference of friends of the Indians here this afternoon.

"Let the doors be closed against the sale of any minor's land, unless he dies," he said. "I do not look with such horror upon an adult Indian who would squander his estate, as I do upon the sale of the property of a child, especially when the child itself cannot have any control. It is enough to make such an Indian child an anarchist when it becomes of age and looks back over the scene and realizes that it once had valuable property, and would, upon becoming of age, yet own that property but for some probate court or some dishonest and unthinking guardian. If it does not make an anarchist of him," he added, "it surely will make him a pauper."

Murray condemned bitterly also the citizenship grafters who desire to reopen the rolls to clear titles on some of the property.

FOUND SLUG IN GLOVE OF BOXER

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—Timely intervention by Referee Eddie Randall prevented a possible tragedy at the National Athletic club's boxing show last night. Eddie removed from one of the gloves of Battling Hoffman of Milwaukee a section of half inch steel bar about four inches long.

In the third round of Hoffman's bout with George Ortle, Randall noticed something peculiar about one of the mitts. The glove was cut open, disclosing the bar of steel clutched firmly in Hoffman's palm, on the inside of the leather.

Randall kept his discovery to himself until today. Hoffman was allowed to finish and received a good drubbing from Ortle.

WHAT'S A CABARET EXTRAVAGANZA LIKE

With most of the old stars reporting for duty, and much new talent volunteering, Holley Shepard prophesies a new record of success for the 1913 Elks minstrels.

The show is going to be "just grand." Listen, it's going to be a "cabaret extravaganza."

There are great possibilities in that name. Rags and tangos, of course, but not risqué—maybe. Anyway, Mr. Shepard says it is going to be "different."

LAW EVASION FAILS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 22.—Minus $1,005, and having escaped from "doing three months" on the stone pile, Morris Perlestein, a rich manufacturer of Milwaukee, left for his home today, a much wiser man regarding Pennsylvania non-support laws. According to the police Perlestein moved his business to Milwaukee, Wis., some time ago, hoping to escape payment of a support order for his wife. Solicitor Ryan had him brought back, however, and the court gave him the option of paying his arrears, which amounted to $605 plus the cost of his extradition, $400, or swinging the hammer on the stone pile.

"YOUNG OLD MEN" MEET

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 22.—Perhaps one of the most unique organizations in Cleveland was formed today when close to 200 "young old men"—men barred from employment by gray hair and the age limit that modern industry has set—met in the council chambers of the city hall and laid plans for working out their own problems. They plan a campaign to inform business men of the "young old men," prematurely aged perhaps, who form a rapidly growing group of individuals whose strength is not yet spent and whose need is mostly for employment.

TWO DOZEN FACE LOOTING CHARGE

Former City Officials of East St. Louis Indicted for Robbing Treasury

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Oct. 22.—Twenty-four former East St. Louis officials were today indicted by the St. Clair county grand jury together with four other persons. Most of the indictments charge conspiracy to defraud the city.

The list of indicted includes former Mayor Charles S. Lambert, former Treasurer Fred Gerold, more than a dozen former councilmen, and several departmental heads. Gerold is charged with embezzlement amounting to $50,000 and the former comptroller also charged with conspiring with other officials to loot the city treasury. Most of the officials are charged with fraud amounting to $100,000.

Double payments of bonds and coupons will be shown by the state, according to State's Attorney Webb together with exorbitant prices for supplies and work. Webb says in many cases the city did not receive money for money expended. He says he will not be limited to showing the $100,000 named as fraud, the law allowing the showing of any amount.

The fourteen members of the council, including Lambert, Gerold and Rodenberger, are indicted on a charge of defrauding the city by conspiracy of $25,000.

CHARGE FRAUD TO CHICAGO LAWYER

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Weymouth Kirkland, Chicago attorney, was today indicted on the charge of obtaining money on false pretenses from the Chicago Railway company and capias were to be issued for his arrest this afternoon.

According to State's Attorney Hoyne, Kirkland's indictment was based on a statement made to the grand jury by Thomas G. Lynch, an investigator for the company. Lynch, according to Hoyne, confessed that he employed Kirkland to act as counsel in several suits brought against the railway company and that although Kirkland performed no services, he (Lynch) approved his fees, and the two then split sums that aggregated between $50,000 and $60,000.

Kirkland was in court when the indictment was returned, but refused to make any statement.

HELD FOR ALLEGED THEFT OF DUCKS

Herman Smerling, 907 Hagar street, one of the proprietors of the La Crosse Brush company, was arrested by Detective Dan Deneen as one of a party alleged to have stolen ten ducks from a pen in the rear of Rufus Blanchard's home, 612 Rose street, Monday night.

Smerling denies his guilt and is out on bail. The police are looking for other men, said to be railroad employees, who, it is claimed, not only assisted in the pilfering of the coop but consumed a portion of the feathered loot.

The police refuse to divulge names. Smerling's arrest followed a stealthy search, conducted by the North side detective and patrolmen, through alleys, hencoops and back yards.

PREVENT TRAIN ROBBERY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 22.—Trainmen and police here today believed that a hold up of the Chicago & Alton midnight flyer was narrowly averted early today. Suspicion is attached to the robbers who last night stole $100 worth of revolvers and cartridges from the Payne Sporting Goods store here. Trainmen walking the tracks at 2 a. m. discovered two red lanterns placed on the track facing the approaching train. They notified the police and two posses of sheriffs' deputies and police hurried to the place. The train was stopped and the surrounding territory was fruitlessly searched.

SAYS ADMIRAL TALKED KILLING

Son-in-law of Mrs. Eaton Says Sailor Sickened and Died Shortly After

TO CONCENTRATE ON INSANITY
Prosecution Seems Intent on Pushing the Question to the Front

COURT HOUSE, PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 22.—Ralph Keyes, son-in-law of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, this afternoon testified that he overheard a conversation between his wife and Mrs. Eaton in which his wife said the admiral had proposed to her that they put Keyes and Mrs. Eaton out of the way and take a trip to Europe together. According to Keyes, his wife went to Assinippi to visit her mother on the same day that Mrs. Eaton went to visit her daughter and the conversation occurred at this time. On hearing this confession from her daughter, Keyes said, Mrs. Eaton immediately took train for Assinippi at daybreak and that evening the admiral took sick, later died and was proved to have died from poisoning.

Letters written by Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, charged with the murder by poisoning of Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, were introduced in court today rather mysteriously by the prosecution attorneys, who claim they will become the crux of the entire case.

The letters caused such excitement in the court that they overshadowed the admission by a state officer that his search of three states had failed to reveal where the poison which killed the admiral was purchased.

This admission practically puts it up to the government to prove an airtight circumstantial case against the prisoner, and it was stated that the letters, some of which were yet to be presented then the afternoon session opened, would strengthen the chain of circumstantial evidence.

GIRL EXPERIMENTS IN BED BUG "WHY"

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22.—Famed far and wide, for doing things for human betterment, the University of Wisconsin has tackled a brand new problem. In the biology building are being carried on some scientific researches into the old question of why is the bedbug. A charming young woman experimenter is doing the researching, and aesthetically minded friends are carefully shielding her from publicity.

The purpose of the experimenting is to determine whether or not the little household pests have any faculty for carrying and spreading disease, particularly typhoid fever germs. It is believed by authorities on the subject that they do, but this has not been definitely ascertained.

The experimenter studies the breeding and habits of the bug under different conditions, how far they travel when fed, how they are affected by light, etc. The results will undoubtedly be regarded as of great importance in determining the exact status of the bedbug.

PANAMA AND THE CANAL IN PICTURE AND PROSE EDUCATES AS WELL AS ENTERTAINS

Willis J. Abbot, the author of this book, takes you in at the front door of Panama, tells you the time when Columbus searched for a natural waterway to the Pacific Ocean, brings you up through the centuries of revolution and warfare, and on through to the realization of the greatest achievement of this day and age. He tells you of the people and the country, of the past as well as the present, and even dips into the promises for the future. The great story is inspiring—filled to the full with local color and human interest—a story that will live as long as the great canal itself.

ASKS BALM FROM RICH LUMBERMAN

ST. PAUL, Oct. 22.—Taking evidence in the $25,000 breach of promise suit instituted by Ada M. Cox against Rufus Edwards, millionaire lumberman, was begun in district court here today. This is the second trial of the case. The first jury returned a verdict of $15,000 for Miss Cox, but the supreme court ordered a new trial. Miss Cox claims Edwards took advantage of her under a promise of marriage. Edwards maintains that he paid Miss Cox $250 for a release from his promise.

Edwards is now under indictment in Chicago on a charge of violating the Mann white slave act in sending Miss Cox money for her transportation from Chicago to St. Paul.

CONVICT DOCTOR OF MISUSING MAIL

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 22.—After a deliberation of fifteen minutes, a jury in the federal court Tuesday afternoon brought in a verdict of guilty in the case of Dr. T. Tree Dispersals Water.

On one of the Canary Islands there is a tree which dispels from its branches actual rain to such an extent that a cistern placed at its base is never unfilled. This tree grows in one of the driest islands, through which no water ever flows. The branches of the trees are a cloud that changes into moisture frequently and sheds clear water.

AFTER YEARS

T was all hers. As far as she could see the beautiful stretches of rolling lawn, of woodlands and cultivated acres that ended only at the banks of the river belonged to Eugene Fairweather, and yet the woman stood gazing so miserably enough on the sunlit scene.

Fifty years ago she had been born in that very house, the substantial pioneer foundations of which had been added to and elaborated by successive generations of Fairweathers following the original one, who had come out from the Eastern states when the West was a wilderness.

She had grown into a beauty and a belle with all the Fairweather pride, and in all the strength of her young womanhood she had indignantly fought the astounding fact that she had fallen in love with Archie Cramer.

In all the surrounding counties there had been no one to touch him in his defiant young manhood, his clearness of eye, his strength and his laughter, also no one was so hopelessly poor and commonplace of birth as he was.

Eugenie had, in her girlhood, often ridden her horse up to the blacksmith shop of Archie's father for necessary repairs, and sometimes Archie himself had taken the ride.

He was of another world, and so the day when chance had thrown them together at the big township picnic up the Lemark river she had been touched by the glamor of the fresh June day, and rendered helpless against the fascination of this young giant.

He was reading law at night, so report said, and wearing frayed collars cheerfully, but she had wandered up the river path with him and was thrilled by the sense of adventure, of having defied the laws of her conventional life.

Possibly there was a touch of pleasant coquetry in her kindness to him, a knowledge that back among her own friends there were several young men anxiously wondering where she was and with whom. How they would stare if they knew!

And then of a sudden her calm world had gone to smash. She found herself standing under a sweeping willow tree, with Archie Cramer close beside her, her hands in his, his face bent near hers.

She did not heed the words tumbling from his lips, for his face made them unnecessary. As she looked and saw revealed all the worship, all the strength and aspirations of his powerful young manhood there was an instant when the surge of a great happiness swept her very soul and she recognized her mate.

Then as he had cried "You do love me, Eugenie!" something dashed the vision into darkness and she drew away from him, her eyes blazing, a sense of shame seizing her. She had stayed months and had flirted and laughed and sung and filled up the hours. And when she came back to the Fairweather home, Archie Cramer had left the village and gone farther West.

That had been all, and now she was 50 years old and alone in the big house, and it was spring and she was very tired and strangely sad. There had been suitors, but not one of them had power to touch her heart.

Today, as she stood looking across the meadows at the sunset, this tall, sad-looking woman with the well-poised head and traces of her girlhood still showing on her face, she owned to herself for the first time what she had lost from her life through foolish pride.

A strange feeling of humility toward the Archie Cramer of those long-gone days, a sense of injustice done him, pervaded her mind and added to her dormant unhappiness. Wherever he had gone, whatever he had become, he had been all that was

"I saw you this morning as I drove through the village," she told him. "Who was that pretty girl you were talking with across the fence? I don't recall her."

Burnett Fairweather flushed slightly, but met her look. "They've only recently moved here," he said. "They're poor—her mother sews."

Miss Fairweather, with the telepathic sense of disaster, found her delicate hands clenching at something in the boy's tone.

"It's queer," he went on; "her name is the same as yours—Eugenie."

"Burnett," the woman gasped, "don't hide things from me—tell me you care for this girl?"

The young eyes met the incredulous old ones. "Yes," he said, softly, as though in wonder at the words of it, "I haven't told her, though. She's sweet and—"

Miss Fairweather was on her feet. "Don't!" she said, huskily, pain on every line of her face. "I'd such great hopes for you, Burnett! You, with your looks and your brains and your position! You could have married a daughter!"

The boy was on his feet by this time and his face matched hers in its rigidity.

And in the same fury she had packed her trunks and gone to Virginia to visit relatives, her pallor manly and lovable, and she felt she owed him reparation in her inmost thought for insulting him. For it had been an insult, huriling in his face his honest love for her!

A clear whistle cut through her dreamings and she turned with her rare smile to greet her nephew, who shared the old home with her. A fine

"Bring her here, Burnett," she said. "I want to see her. Bring her here—it's all I can do to show him that I know now!"

And, wondering, Burnett Fairweather hastened with the impetuosity of youth, down to the little house where Archie Cramer's daughter

What Did She Think He Wanted?

The Millers went on a tour by motor car and arrived late one evening at a village, which was crowded for the annual fair. There was only one inn and not a bed in it to be had. The couple were tired out and felt unable to go any further, so Miller said to the landlady: "Can't you give me a bundle of hay?" "I'm sorry sir," she said. "There's not a thing left but a bit of cold roast beef."

Believed Fish Had a Language.

In the old Roman days the muras, or sea eels, were supposed to be possessed of a "language"—"low and sweet," it is denominated by one ancient writer, "and with an intonation so fascinating that few could resist its influence." The Emperor Augustus, it was contended, was the only mortal who could understand this "language."

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The stock market opened active and slightly lower.

11 a. m.—Stocks did not develop any rallying power up to the end of the first hour, but the undertone was not weak at any time and the market showed ability to absorb sales. There was quite a little scattered realizing and commission houses as a rule advised customers who were bullishly inclined to refrain from making purchases at present.

Noon.—The market was dull at the end of the second hour.

2 p. m.—There was little activity in the early afternoon.

TO BE TRIED FOR "YOUNG" FATALITY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 22.—On January 17 next Jess Willard, prize fighter; Tom McCarey, promoter, and nine others, will go to trial on charge of violating the anti-prize fight law.

Superior Judge Craig has overruled their demurrers. All pleaded not guilty.

The cases grew out of the death of John W. Young, who was fatally injured in a fight with Willard at Vernon last August. Judge Craig declared any ring contest "where the incentive is to win through a knockout and not through boxing" is a prize fight.

RITCHIE SAYS 135 RINGSIDE IS LIMIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Fight fans were much excited here today over the possibility of a real fight between Packey McFarland and Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie, as a result of the latter's announcement that he did not consider 133 pounds the ringside lightweight limit. Ritchie declared that as the champion he believed he had the right to name the limit and proceed to raise it to 135 pounds.

REICH LICKS EASY ONE

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Al Reich, former amateur heavyweight champion, had taken the first step in his second attempt to reach the heavyweight championship of the world today. Reich knocked out Tim Logan in the fourth round of a scheduled ten round bout last night. Reich's managers picked Carl Morris as his opponent in the second professional fight in which Reich appeared and he was knocked cold.

SMITH STOPS ROSS

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 22.—Tony Ross of Newcastle, Pa., is the latest hopeless "white hope" today following his knockout by Gunboat Smith, in the tenth round of a bout scheduled for 12 at the Atlas Athletic club last night. Smith's right hook to the jaw did the trick after the Newcastle fighter had taken counts of nine twice in the eighth and had come up again.

MASS MEETING AT HIGH SCHOOL TODAY

Heart Enthusiasm Marks Preliminary Meeting Before Eau Claire Game Saturday

New songs and yells were tried out amid vast enthusiasm at the high school this morning, when the general assembly period was given over to a mass meeting for the Eau Claire game Saturday. Little is known about the prospects of victory in the game, as Eau Claire's record has not been closely watched.

That the up-staters have a strong team, however, is conceded, and Coach Horne is taking no chances. He is working his big squad hard every afternoon, and the rivalry for positions on the regular lineup continues with as much interest as when the football men first got out for practice.

The crowd will be a record breaker, according to Faculty Manager of Athletics Layton Gouldin. Mr. Gouldin took charge of athletics this year, and his unique ideas of advertising and feature stunts to attract attendance have made the football season an unqualified success. Mr. Gouldin has arranged to have the normal school band at Saturday's game, inspired by the effect of their music at the Winona game a week from last Saturday.

Among the new stunts put over by the Athletic association at the suggestion of Mr. Gouldin is the publication today of a book containing the songs and yells of the high school. The pamphlet is printed in the high school colors. It contains twelve songs, most of them new this year, and all of the old familiar yells, with a few new ones added. Copies of the little book were distributed at the mass meeting this morning.

GROCER ASPHYXIATES

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 22.—Paul Webber, 63 years old, son of the late Henry Webber, who is said to have founded the first grocery business in Minneapolis, is dead today at his home here from suffocation. The aged grocer was found dead in his room early today by his son, Henry. The windows in the room were closed and the door shut. The son said he believed his father died of suffocation due to a small gas heater burning all the oxygen in the air. The coroner's office is investigating.

VILLAGE BURNS

JACKSON, Mich., Oct. 22.—Nine buildings, representing practically the entire business section of the little town of Munich, fourteen miles northeast of here, were in ruins today, as the result of a fire which started last night and burned unchecked, until daylight. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

CHRISTIE VS. ZANDERS

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 22.—Gus Christie of Indianapolis and Ernie Zanders of Chicago have been matched for a ten round no-decision go at the South Side Athletic club Oct. 27, it was announced.

PUTS MEN THROUGH HARD SCRIMMAGE

Juneau Irons Out Rough Places in Preparation for Michigan Aggies

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22.—The first scrimmage of the week in preparation for the game with the Michigan Aggies was held at Camp Randall yesterday afternoon. The varsity was sent against both the second and the third teams. They showed lots of ginger and pep in the work. The work and generalship of Buck Bellows, who has been much criticised during the past two or three weeks, was of the improved order. He ran the team in good shape yesterday.

The practice was held in a temperature of about freezing, which made the handling of the ball hard. Juneau also gave the men some work with the dummy, so that they will know in future how to stop Oliphants when they get through the line. Signal practice preceded the regular scrimmage. All of the work was done behind closed doors. Today the weekly open scrimmage will be held.

Though the game at Lafayette was a hard one and the score a close one, none of Juneau's pet plays were exhibited. The work on the part of the Badger team was of the old style variety exclusively. They worked through the line for practically all of the gains that they made. The work on the forward pass, and most of the trick plays that the varsity have been taught were not disclosed to the scouts of the Chicago and Minnesota teams present.

The feeling at Wisconsin is that they will whip the Michigans when they come here on Saturday. The student body is bubbling over with confidence. But the town people and others interested are not so sure, and this is made apparent by the trend of what betting is being done on the game. The Aggies are being quoted favorites 5 to 4 and 4 to 3. Wisconsin men maintain that they have an even chance of winning. In case the team wins on Saturday, the Badgers will be heavy favorites in their match with Minnesota a week later.

WONT CALL MITCHEL

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—After conference in which the district attorney took part it was today decided not to call John Purroy Mitchell to hear his charge that Charles F. Murphy is contemplating importing repeaters for the coming municipal elections.

The grand jury this afternoon sent word to Mitchell that if he has any proof of such allegations or any information on the subject to submit it to the grand jury.

GRIDIRON GOSSIP

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 22.—Coach Grady and the entire under-graduate body of Northwestern university today were anxiously awaiting word in response to their appeal to President Wilson to permit Carol Dwight Hale, member of the Evanston Life Saving crew and a senior at Northwestern to play on the purple eleven.

Hale is one of the best back field men at Northwestern. After Northwestern suffered two disastrous defeats by Purdue and Illinois, he agreed to get into the game if the government authorities permitted him to resign or give him a leave of absence from the life saving service, in which he enlisted for one year. President Wilson, it is understood, here, will refer the telegram to Secretary of Commerce Redfield.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 22.—For the first time since the Lafayette game, the Yale football squad is now at its full strength. Markle and Cornell, both of whom have been out of the lineup because of minor injuries, took part in the practice scrimmage today. Pumpelly also got in the practice and "Bud" Weiser appeared in uniform.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 22.—Coach Haughton of Harvard, is spending much time trying to get members of the Crimson squad in condition as he is in work out formations to be used in the big games. Captain Storer, Hitchcock, Bradley, Trumbull, Pennock and Hardwick are suffering from minor injuries. They did not take part in the scrimmage. Charles Brickley returned to the line up yesterday but twisted his ankle and may take a few days more rest.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—The Princeton football team was put through a long stiff practice today in preparation for the game with Dartmouth Saturday. The varsity was given some strenuous defensive work against Dartmouth for matrons.

CALLS CONTROL NECESSARY

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Congressman Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland, O., member of the house currency committee, declared government control of banking absolutely necessary in an address at a luncheon given by the Illinois Manufacturers' association today, in voicing his appeal of the Owen-Glass bill.
